EIGHTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER PENTECOST

GOSPEL Matt. 9:1-8

At that time, Jesus entering into a boat, passed over the water and came into His own city. And behold they brought to Him one sick of the palsy lying in a bed. And Jesus, seeing their faith, said to the man sick of the palsy: "Be of good heart, son, thy sins are forgiven thee." And behold some of the scribes said within themselves: "He blasphemeth." And Jesus seeing their thoughts, said: "Why do you think evil in your hearts? Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins are forgiven thee: or to say, Arise, and walk? But that you may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins," (then said he to the man sick of the palsy,) "Arise, take up thy bed, and go into thy house." And he arose, and went into his house. And the multitude seeing it, feared, and glorified God that gave such power to men.

"The Innocence of Serpents": Francis' Silence is not Jesus' Silence.

by John Zmirak

Caution parents, some may find parts of the following offensive. Taken from the "conservative" NO site, Rorate Caeli

What's the worst part of Francis' response to the exposure of clerical sex abuse and cover-ups? You might say, "Where to begin?" and point to a dozen different facets of the corruption of the priesthood by the (NO) bishops.

The list of scandals against supernatural faith and natural justice could fill up thousands of words. Others such as Paul Rahe and Benjamin Wiker have done yeoman's work unpacking it all. I don't need to add very much. Let me just mention one point which offends me to the core.

Not just as a Catholic. Or even as a Christian. If I were a mere agnostic, it still would turn my stomach.

And that's the claim made by Francis' defenders that in refusing to answer Abp. Vigano's charges, the pope is acting like Jesus, when He was hauled up before Herod:

And Herod, seeing Jesus, was very glad; for he was desirous of a long time to see Him, because he had heard many things of Him; and he hoped to see some sign wrought by Him. And he questioned Him in many words. But He answered him nothing. (Luke 23: 8-9)

Quite a potent tactic. It's a way of painting stonewalling as an imitation of Christ. Father Marcial Maciel used this stratagem, and for a long while it worked. As one accuser came forth after another, he smothered their claims in silence. That gave his monied cronies and guilty enablers a high-minded pretext to hide behind, as many did, for years.

In fact, it's the starkest blasphemy.

Even fair-minded unbelievers ought to be outraged, if they see Jesus for what He was: an innocent man, hunted to His death by political enemies. To seize on Jesus' innocence, and His dignified refusal to answer the corrupt tyrant Herod, who would have set Him free in return for some petty miracle ... and weaponize it on behalf of a ruler's arrogant silence.... That is repulsive, on a purely human level. It's like smooching together Anne Frank and Josef Goebbels as "casualties of the Second World War."

Too much you say? Isn't it equally possible that Francis indeed is innocent, at least of the charge that he knew about and repealed Benedict's (feeble) sanctions against McCarrick? And did so in return for McCarrick's support at the Conclave?

We may never know. The documents which prove Vigano's testimony, are under Francis' control. Unless he's already ordered that they be shredded, they sit in archives in Rome and in Washington, D.C. at the nunciature. Journalists should be demanding them.

A U.S. attorney ought to subpoena these files, to see if U.S. bishops violated RICO laws by shuffling sex abusers. The Church ought to have to hand them over, waiving its frail diplomatic immunity as the price of ongoing relations with the United States of America. I don't know if that will happen. My colleague Austin Ruse has called on President Trump to demand it. All that is politics. Who knows how it will play out? But we do know the following facts.

Francis lives in a house (Casa Santa Marta) managed by a priest who consorted with male prostitutes. Francis was backed for the papacy by molester Cardinal McCarrick and coverup artist-cardinals Danneels and Wuerl. He plucked Danneels from disgrace under Benedict XVI, inviting Danneels to join him when he first addressed Roman crowds, and asking him to speak (at the Synod on the Family) to the bishops of the world. Francis had previously lifted penalties on at least one powerful molester in the mold of McCarrick.

Francis defied cries of victims, and elevated a bishop in Chile who'd actively covered for a molester. When Francis' mockery of the victims blew up in the press, he blamed the local bishops and called one victim to Rome. Then he told the young man that God (not the priest who molested him) had "made him gay."

Think of all this. Think then of Father Maciel. And think of the innocence of Jesus.

FATHER SAFREED'S REFLECTIONS

“SCRUPULOSITY”

It might come as a surprise to some in our era of widespread immorality and general laxity of conscience, that there are individuals who suffer greatly from something called “scrupulosity.” Any priest who has heard the confessions of Traditional Catholics will know what I’m talking about. Scrupulosity is a serious and painful problem for some, and is difficult to deal with on the pastoral level. I have found that many don’t even understand that such a condition exists. Perhaps the best way to define scrupulosity is to list some of its signs:

- [1] Fear of committing sin while doing things that even devout people don’t find sinful.
- [2] A person changes their mind for trivial reasons about whether something is sinful; one minute they think something is not sinful and the next minute that it is sinful.
- [3] Constant worry or anxiety about sin, without being able to figure out the reason why.
- [4] Constant worry about their confessions, even though the priest has told them there was nothing wrong with them.
- [5] Being stubborn with the priest in confession --- thinking that you are right about something being sinful and that he is wrong. You must obey the priest.
- [6] The scrupulous go from one priest to another because they don’t trust the advice of any of them --- and for this reason they take the advice of none of them. Pretty hard today, especially when there are very few Traditional priests around!
- [7] Asking again and again whether or not a particular action or even a thought is sinful even though the priest has answered the question, perhaps many times before.
- [8] Confession of sins repeatedly --- “just in case” --- things that either the priest has told you are not sins, or things that have long since been forgiven.

The best way to deal with scrupulosity: [1] Express GRATITUDE to God for the good things He has given you; [2] distract yourself by doing something to otherwise occupy your mind; [3] Do not confess a sin unless there is NO DOUBT that it is a mortal sin; [4] THOUGHTS or doubts are not ordinarily sins unless you act on them; [5] do not mention a past sin in confession unless you are absolutely sure it was a mortal sin, and absolutely sure you never confessed it; [6] NEVER confess a doubtful sin; [7] accept the priest’s judgement about whether or not something is sinful.

Furthermore, and this is an important point: Just having a doubt whether or not you committed a mortal sin SHOULD NOT keep you away from Holy Communion. Unless you are ABSOLUTELY SURE that you are in a state of mortal sin, make an Act of Contrition and go to Communion. The reception of Holy Communion is not for the perfect, but for sinners who need God’s help and grace. Which is all of us!
